For a successful team, communication and find problems in time are the most important parts. I was the team leader of two projects, I spent a lot of energy on communicating with team members and finding the potential problems early. When I discovered a problem, I organized team members to discuss and find the solution as soon as possible. The earlier the problem is found, the less difficult the project is。 The more the team members communicate, the more smoothly the project is going on。 Due to my excellent communication skills, the projects were carried out smoothly and completed ahead of schedule.
